EL BATON DOUBLE TORPEDO

Ring Gauge: 56 Length: 6'25
 Strength: Full-Strong
 Filler: Nicaraguan
 Binder: Nicaraguan
 Wrapper: 100% Nicaraguan
 Corojo
 Cigar Rating: 91

A buttery blend of chocolate, aged tobacco, and gourmet breads introduced this smoking experience. The word "quality" came to mind from the first puff. About an inch and a half into the cigar, flourishes of toasted nuts began to appear from time to time, as if the cigar intended to keep my palette intrigued with a pleasant inconsistency. Around the halfway point, hints of mocha surfaced in the flavor profile. The El Baton did not evolve too much from its original flavor, but the periodic nuances of coffee and toasted nuts provided enough complexity to hold my interest through the rich, smooth finish. $9.00

EL BATON ROBUSTO

Ring Gauge: 54 Length: 5
 Strength: Full-Strong
 Filler: Nicaraguan
 Binder: Nicaraguan
 Wrapper: 100% Nicaraguan
 Corojo
 Cigar Rating: 90

After that initial blast, this full bodied cigar brings forth flavors of cedar, coffee grounds and pepper. These are all very strong, very earthy flavors. There was a faint sweet taste on my lips at the finish. In contrast to the dark wrapper, the ash on the El Baton was very white and held on for a good inch before dropping. The burn was very even and never required a touch up. During the second half of the smoke, the cigar mellowed a bit and the flavor changed to a smooth coffee and cream while the strength and body stayed the same. The cigar burned cool to the end, making it easy to nub. $9.00
